AIRPORT
MONOPOLY CHARGED

Irving M. Lessin, attorney for Vegas Airways, charges Collins-Dietrich Air Services Inc., manager of the Torrance Airport, with monopoly in regards to the recent controversy over fueling rights.

Collins-Dietrich is attempting to stop Vegas Airways from dispensing petroleum products to aircraft on the basis it is a breach of contract. Lessin argues that "Vegas has not sold one drop of gasoline to any other aircraft besides its own... and they have a right to service their aircraft under terms of the present contract."

City Attorney Stanley E. Remelmeyer was asked for a clear interpretation of the contract to clear up the matter. However, Remelmeyer stated: "A previous rendering of the contract's meaning was given by both myself and former city attorney, James M. Hall."

"At that time it was our opinion that Collins-Dietrich did have exclusive right to sell petroleum products at the airport."

It has been agreed by the Airport Commission that before a recommendation is made, the city attorney should study the terms of the contract and then give his opinion whether Vegas has a right to serve its own aircraft with petroleum products.
